

THE BARRE DAILY TIMES

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1911.

Published every week-day afternoon.
Subscriptions: One year, $3.00; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent.

Entered at the post office at Barre as second-class matter.

Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the year 1910 was copies, the largest circulation of any daily paper in Vermont outside of Burlington.

5,626

It is perhaps proper to call the youthful bride of Lord Decies a lordling now.

Montpelier annexed part of Berlin in 1895 and is buying the remainder now.

Barre's municipal debts can be counted on one's fingers, and no freak hand at that.

Municipal vaudeville has failed in Milwaukee, but it still holds the stage in Burlington.

U. S. Collector Charles H. Darling of the Burlington port is not the darling of the Burlington aldermen.

This Mexican revolution reminds one, for all the world, like a dress parade—advance, retreat, etc.

That new river channel will be extremely useful in carrying off this tremendous blanket of snow; and no one realizes it more than the people along the west side of Main street.

The newspapers take a column or so to announce that Anthony J. Drexel, who married a Gould, is going to work learning the stock exchange business from A to Z. We predict he will take it from E. Z., instead.

As soon as Percival W. Clement poked his head above the political surface in Rutland, the esteemed News of that city began to take some shots at it. The contemporary didn't mistake it for a solored quarettie, did it?

Mayor Gaynor is most elaborately polite when his automobile bumps into a young lady, and knocks her down and then rolls her along a New York pavement. Still, most people would hesitate to take that measure to secure the same treatment from his honor.

The trouble which Governor Foss had getting elected as chief executive of Massachusetts is nothing compared with the trouble he is having to fill vacant places on the superior court bench. They all plead inadequate salary attachment; and, of course, they wouldn't take the office to accommodate Foss.

Up to date, no one has attempted to answer the query of the St. Albans Messenger why the late legislature voted to place a medallion of Governor Mead as a Civil War veteran in the State House without voting to do the same for other governors who were participants in the notable struggle. We guess, Mr. Messenger, that your point is well taken and that there is really no ground for the discrimination; only that the legislature was a trifle thoughtless in the matter. (P. S. Pica excus. all neestaks.)

It seems rather peculiar that the bill making an appropriation of $28,000 for the erection of two dormitories at the Vermont industrial school at Vergennes provides that the trustees of the institution may expend $300 annually for the "religious training of the inmates outside the institution," the money to go to the Vergennes churches. Has it come to the point that the church must be paid for ministering to the spiritual wants of the public? In former days the church was pleased to do what it could to as many people as it could gather and without compensation.

BARRE'S SCHOOLS.

It is scarcely possible to present in this newspaper the entire reports of the school commissioners and the school superintendent of Barre covering the past year's administration of the public schools of the city; but the attention of our readers is directed to the summary to be found in another column, with the recommendation that on the distribution of the annual city reports the reports in their entirety be perused carefully. There is a great deal of valuable information about the schools, which is but slightly known to the majority of the citizens; and as this is the summing up of the conditions the citizens will find it to their advantage to take up the reports. Satisfactory progress has been made during the year, and the instruction has been maintained at a high standard; but the quality and quantity of the work are somewhat handicapped by outside influences which are touched upon by the commissioners and the superintendent. In this connection, the duty of the parents is tactfully pointed out in the reports, and the recommendations are worth considering by all the parents of the city. The recommendations were presented, not with the purpose to be meddling and fault-finding but rather with the desire to do the greatest amount of good for the children who are placed in the public schools. If the parents co-operate in the work, as suggested, it will be possible to greatly increase the efficiency of the school system. Therefore, the general public is urged to consider the reports of its stewards carefully.

Current Comment

80 Years Young.

Professor J. E. Goodrich is observing the 80th anniversary of his birth. He is receiving the congratulations of a host of friends in Burlington, and wherever there is an alumnus of the university of Vermont, in this or other lands, there will be found a faithful admirer who would gladly share personally in these solicitations to a beloved professor who is 80 years young.—Burlington Free Press.

Governorship Talk.

Amid all the speculation as to the governorship in 1912, perhaps the most puzzling list of "those mentioned" for the position is advanced by the Vergennes Enterprise, of which Representative R. W. McCuen is editor. Inasmuch as Mr. McCuen was one of the leading members of the last House and was at the center of things at the capital for three months, the names mentioned are of more than passing interest. The list includes L. P. Slack of St. Johnsbury, now lieutenant-governor, Senator John W. Gordon of Washington county, Representatives F. H. Babbitt of Bellows Falls and Allen M. Fletcher of Cavendish and Joseph A. DeBoer of Montpelier. Of course, no list of gubernatorial possibilities from the east side of the state would be complete without the two last names. But isn't it strange, in view of the fact that the present governor of Vermont is "the best loved governor the state ever had," according to Montpelier reports, that talk of a second term for the incumbent of the office is not heard? A medallion in the State House and a second term would be "going some," would it not?—Rutland News.

Credit to State House Reporters.

The Bennington Banner gives the legislative reporters a good natured rap for their failure to hit, in their reports of the final adjournment, the exact minute at which the fall of the gavel marked the end of the session. But the editor of the Banner must remember that he himself, as speaker had quite an advantage over his brethren at the press table.—Rutland Herald.
The editor of the Banner will testify for one thing that he never saw a harder working bunch of newspaper men than those at the State House during the recent session. The time has passed when an assignment to cover the legislature for a newspaper is a snap to be envied. The work has multiplied to such an extent that the job comes the nearest to chattel slavery that we ever saw a white man undertake. The newspaper reporter who tried to do his duty, and that means all of them, at the capital during the past three months had no time to eat, little to sleep and could never dream of recreation. The writer of this paragraph was occasionally pained and annoyed at mistakes made by the reporters and at their failure to get at the real inwardness of a situation, but a hundred times more often he was astonished at the amount of work the boys at the press table were able to do and the earnestness and fairness with which they did it.—Bennington Banner.

A Solution.

There's hardly been a year of late when people didn't ask, Shall woman have this privilege, shall she perform that task? "Shall women smoke?" "Shall women bike?" are samples we may quote.

To-day of course the problem is, "Shall women have the vote?" If I were called to arbitrate, this answer I would give, "She shall"—"I would solve the problem just as surely as you live!" From what I know of woman's will, of what she does and don't, I'm certain if we said "She shall," she'd tell us that she won't.—Boston Transcript.

Lady—No, thank you. It won't be too heavy for me.
Obliging Shopman—Oh, no, madam. I'll make it as light as I possibly can.—Punch.

The Woodmen will have a social and dance at their hall on Wednesday, Feb. 8. It is expected all members and ladies will attend.
